- I currently run a film-focused Substack blog, The Wordsmith with a Quill, where I publish analytical essays and critiques on Malayalam cinema. My work explores films through narrative structure, socio-political context, and character psychology, with particular attention to themes such as caste representation and cultural identity.

- In addition to film criticism, I am actively involved in screenwriting. I have written two short film screenplays — one currently in post-production and the other in pre-production.

- I am also the author of a published novel, The Tale of a Villain, a dark fiction work released at the age of fifteen.

- Additionally, pitching articles to magazines and newspapers has helped me understand professional editorial standards and refine my journalistic approach.
